Letter from the Chair: Kenneth (Andy) Andrews

[Image of a group of people at a gathering]

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

As we gear up for another academic year, I am excited to report on the many ways in which we are working to continue the tradition of excellence that defines our department.

First, I want to congratulate our recent graduates. Sherryl Kleinman, a former student of mine, will be joining us in September as a member of our faculty. She is an accomplished scholar and teacher, and I am thrilled to have her on board.

Second, I want to recognize the work of our students. This year, we continued the tradition of holding a joint research symposium with Duke to have our students present their work. The students' presentations were outstanding, and I look forward to seeing their continued success.

Finally, I want to talk about our department's commitment to diversity and inclusion. We are working hard to ensure that our department is a welcoming and supportive environment for all students and faculty.

Thank you for your continued support.

Sincerely,

Kenneth (Andy) Andrews
Chair of the Department of Sociology

---

[Image of a group of people at a gathering]

Contact Us

[Image of a group of people at a gathering]

[Image of a group of people at a gathering]